001. My grand uncle Naum. A void.

002. Medals but no memories

003. Cathedral of Russian Ministry of defense with a postcard from Naum depicting Stalin. Sent before his disappearance in 1942

004. Generative Adversarial Network training on images of WWII

005. Railroad to Stalingrad. Last known position of Naum

006. Leonid Rozenberg, 103 years old, with a battle route map.

007. War Actor. Generative Adversarial Neural Network synthetic image of a war actor

008. Grigoriy and Naum

009. Zaika Aron, Red Army WWII veteran in Brighton Beach, Brooklyn during an interview

010. Naum/Void

011. Defaced WWII monument in Lviv, Ukraine

012. Semen Gitterman looking at synthetic images of War Actors Generated by Generative Adversarial Neural Networks.

013. Battlefield. Synthetic image made with Generative Adversarial Networks trained on an archive of WWII

014. A regiment of recruits on the way to take an oath to the Russian Army

015.Aftermath. Synthetic image made with Generative Adversarial Networks trained on an archive of WWII

016.Gitterman Semen, Red Army WWII veteran during an interview in Brighton Beach, Brooklyn

017. My grand uncle Naum. A void.

018. Michael Shtern, Red Army WWII veteran removing St. Georges ribbon from his coat once learned that the symbol of victory has become a symbol of full scale invasion of Ukraine.

019. Silent Hero.